

Do You Pick Your Congressional Representatives... Or Do They Pick You?

Every 10 years, states redraw their maps to reflect population changes following the census. The process generally benefits the party in power, leading to unfair maps that allow politicians to pick their own voters, instead of the reverse. In 2018, we will elect state representatives that will influence how redistricting is implemented after the 2020 census. Let them know: you're voting for fair districting.

Do You Pick Your State Representatives... Or Do They Pick You?

Every 10 years, states redraw their maps to reflect population changes following the census. The process generally benefits the party in power, leading to unfair maps that allow politicians to pick their own voters, instead of the reverse. In 2018, we will elect state representatives that will influence how redistricting is implemented after the 2020 census. Let them know: you're voting for fair districting.