Upstate N.Y. Transformer Manufacturer Expands Plant, Global Reach

When Bill Woerner was hired by New York’s Niagara Transformer 27 years ago, he joined 80 union workers at a family-owned company, expecting a steady job that could continue to deliver pay and benefits even as the area’s auto plants and steel mills strained under extremes of boom and bust.

“My father was a steelworker who advised me to find the job that would be the most consistent,” says Woerner, who began to learn the trade of a coil winder, producing the interior of the transformers by delicately wrapping copper or aluminum wires around a core interspersed with layers of insulation for cooling.

Woerner says he was proud to contribute to his employer’s success in supplying a niche market for custom-designed transformers that can perform in punishing environments from the North Slope of Alaska to Antarctica.
Niagara Transformer Expands Plant and Job Security

1933—defined the death spiral and was still standing.

The company’s business shifted to production of larger and more complex utility transformers and a new facility became a necessity. Today, journeyman inside wiremen, who are also members of Local 41, are completing a new climate-controlled, dust-free building with carefully managed ambient temperatures, expanded testing and painting capabilities, high ceilings and huge cranes, all designed to accommodate larger transformers.

New Facility Supports Start-to-Finish Production

"The area where new transformers will be tested has the most elaborate grounding system I have ever installed," says Mike Brennan of Ferguson Electric, a local IBEW contractor who is the prime electrical contractor for the expansion. Transformer testing will be observed via streaming video by customers that include utilities, original equipment manufacturers and end users.

"Our joint success, as an IBEW local and as a company, is tied to the efficient, cost effective manufacturing of our product, putting our customer’s quality first and positioning us as a lean, cost effective competitor in what is now a worldwide marketplace," Darby says. "Competitiveness and quality allow us to win, and not just here in the U.S., but in the 82 countries around the world that we service."

While the company continues to diversify and enter new markets, competition continues to grow, with Chinese competitors emerging as the newest threat to U.S. manufacturers.

"As a union, we’ve realized the need to work with the company to continue to make us viable and competitive," says Woerner, a father of three.

Lean Manufacturing

While lean manufacturing has been criticized by some labor activists as a tactic to institute speedup and increase profits on the backs of workers, it has become a necessity. While lean manufacturing has been made popular by Toyota and now used by many manufacturers to streamline their workflow, management and union members recognizes the benefits of lean manufacturing groups that included cross training workers and creating cross functional teams from all areas of the company.

At Niagara, says Woerner, lean manufacturing succeeded by enabling workers who once only knew one aspect of the manufacturing process to understand how their pieces of work fit into the whole puzzle of fabricating high-quality transformers for an ever-changing customer base.

Darby kept faith with the work force as the union’s numbers declined. Members knew that economic development officials in North Carolina had seen competitors come and go. Rapid Transformer, a Connecticut-based company, had come up to Western New York to set up operations in a facility that had been abandoned by Worthington Industry. They didn’t last, but Niagara did, with the help of high skill and productive IBEW work force it employed.

Skill, Experience Protect Jobs

"John Darby had to weigh his options, but I’m convinced that the single most important factor in his decision to remain in this area was the skill and experience of our members and their commitment to producing the highest quality products," says Local 41 Business Manager Mike Galser.

Darby tapped help from his state’s congressional delegation. Sen. Kirsten Gillibrand (D-N.Y.) and Rep. Brian Higgins (R-N.Y.) nurtured Niagara’s development of the site of its new plant through their support of the Brownfields Utilization, Investment and Local Development (BUILD) Act. Darby joined them at a press conference on the site last July to applaud the program that gives incentives to companies for cleaning up contaminated parcels, building new infrastructure and returning sites to productive use.

*The Federal BUILD program and similar New York State programs we participated in have been efficient and effective from my point of view and should be a model of how government and the private sector can work together to benefit the entire community, grow jobs and build investment for many years to come," Darby said.

Niagara’s commitment is to Upstate New York, says Woerner, who served on Local 41’s negotiating committee through several contracts. Darby added “We want to win here—in Western New York—in our own backyard.”

Reiterating the tag line he lent to the company’s Web site, Darby summarizes what makes Niagara different: “At our core, Niagara Transformer has the best people taking on the toughest engineering challenges with the highest quality and the shortest lead times.”

Global Competition Still Hitting Home

Comparing the consciousness of union activists in the ‘60s and ‘70s to the thinking of today’s grassroots members, Woerner says there is a greater understanding of the need to factor in not just what the employers are up against, but the competition we face as workers.” He expresses concern that the rules governing global trade are still skewed against domestic workers and owners alike, leaving fewer success stories like the one emerging at Niagara Transformer.

The U.S. government and our companies spend money to design and engineer products and other countries steal it, he says. “Domestic manufactur- ers have all of the expenses and the competitors reap all of the cost savings and more,” he says. “The blowback hurts responsible employers like Niagara Transformer. As longtime employees retire and Darby looks to staff the new facility, he is having trouble finding suitable applicants. Regional job markets are always subject to a multitude of factors, but Buffalo’s mature manufacturing base has been eroding for decades, Woerner said. “Too many young people have been told by their parents: ‘There is no future making things with your hands. Go to college and get an education.’”

However, as Niagara Transformer has proved, there is productive and satisfying work out there for young people who want to come to work, work hard and learn a trade with a company and a union that are working jointly by investing and planning for their successful, collective future.
Ohio Activists Call on University to Drop Questionable Contractor

Safe building trades activists and safety advocates are calling on Ohio University to take a closer look at its choice of electrical contractor, citing its numerous safety citations and a checkered workers’ rights record.

GC Turner Construction, Athens-based Ohio University’s main contractor, hired Claypool Electric as part of a major expansion and renovation project last summer. But the Affiliated Construction Trades, a construction safety watchdog group, has accused Claypool of numerous safety and wage violations over the years, including:

- 10 citations by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration over the last 13 years; seven are classified by OSHA as “serious.”
- The Ohio Department of Commerce has investigated Claypool four times over violations of state prevailing wage law, two times on the Ohio University project alone.
- Claypool has been investigated by the National Labor Relations Board for violations of workers’ rights on nine occasions.

Last spring, three former employees were awarded back pay for overtime work after the IBEW brought unfair labor practice charges against the company. ACT Ohio set up an online petition and Web site—www.safeacampusinf.com—to raise awareness about Claypool.

The campaign has received local media coverage.

“Quality contractors help insure work is completed to all regulations and safety standards, helping create a safe work environment,” says ACT Ohio’s petition. “We are trying to show OU’s president that there is support for Claypool Electric, a contractor with a record of wage and safety violations.”

After the company—which has 170 paid employees—expanded into Athens, workers set up a volunteer organizing committee. To help workers get back pay they were owed, all nine locals contributed to a group legal fund to bring the issue before the NLRB.

Members of the VDC petitioned for an election last summer, but as soon as they did, management began harassing pro-union workers, and holding mandatory captive audience meetings.

“We were doing very well with card signing, but then Claypool brought in an anti-union law firm,” said Fourth District State Organizing Coordinator Bert McDermitt Jr. “They started up with the scare tactics.”

The company’s heavy hand convinced enough employees to change their mind about signing cards.

Despite the setback, Local 972 Business Manager Troy Ferrell said the IBEW will continue to fight for Claypool workers.

“Claypool paid us nothing,” he said. “Now that I’ve joined the IBEW, I like the work, I like the pay and benefits.”

His comments are echoed by another former Claypool employee, Charlie Cox. “I like the money and benefits, but what I really like is that our rights are respected and the fact that we have someone to turn to if there’s ever a problem,” said the new Huntington, W.Va., Local 372 member.

McDermitt says the IBEW will continue to fight for Claypool workers.

“We knew it would be difficult, but we’re going to continue to speak out against unfair labor practices and not let Claypool drive standards down in the electrical industry.”

Italian Trade Unionists Commemorate 9/11

In the wake of the attacks against the Twin Towers on September 11, 2001, our national tragedy was felt throughout the world, particularly in Europe, where terrorism has also taken its toll. And many of the 21 IBEW members, the New York City firefighters and others who lost their lives as the towers exploded were among the 27 million Americans who claim Italian ancestry.

In September, Italian trade unionists sponsored a memorial service for 9/11 victims at a monument in Padua built in 2005. The monument, named “Memory and Light,” is the only memorial in Europe paying tribute to 9/11’s victims.

Located in Northern Italy, Padua—the capital of Padua province—is a busy commercial center and home of celebrated art and architecture from the medieval and Renaissance periods.

Sponsors of the international memorial service included Carlo de Mas, secretary general of FLAEI, Italy’s largest union of electricians. The IBEW and FLAEI maintain strong fraternal ties. Carlo de Mas has been a guest at several IBEW conventions.

“I was overwhelmed,” says International Secretary-Treasurer Sam Chilia, who addressed the commemoration.

The IBEW delegation included New York Local 3 Business Manager Chris Ericksson, John Marchetti, the local’s president and Sebastiano Liciardi, representing the victims’ families. Liciardi’s son, Ralph, 30, a father of two and a member of Local 1, was killed on 9/11.

“I was impressed by the way the Italian labor people carry a special passion for the American people,” they view 9/11 personally as if their own sons and daughters lost their lives,” says Chilia.

Members of Local 3’s Sword of Light Pipe Band played bagpipes for an honor guard made up of American and Italian firefighters. A bell made by members of Local 3 and etched with the names of the union’s 9/11 dead was donated to the monument’s museum, which contains a photographic exhibit of people and events surrounding the tragedy.

The mayor of Padua attended, along with Liliana Ocimin, the confederal secretary of the largest labor federation in Italy, and Rick Snelser, from the U.S. Embassy Milan Consulate.

“By sponsoring this extraordinary, thoughtful commemoration, Carlo de Mas and members of Italy’s labor movement have demonstrated that workers in both our nations will never surrender to terrorism and division, but will work together for a safer world where the sons and daughters of workers will prosper together,” IBEW International President Edwin D. Dhill said.

Memory and Light was designed by Daniel Libeskind, an American architect of Polish descent. Built as an etched glass rendering of the “Book of History,” the left hand “page” of the memorial contains a steel beam salvaged from the World Trade Center.

The official Web site for the memorial says, “The latitude of New York is connected to the center of Padua as the vertical hinge of the Book. The Book is luminous, as is the low and expressive wall which creates an intimate place for meditation ... The Book is delicately balanced between the historical buildings of Padua, the bridge, the waterway ... This special place will glow day and night, and throughout the seasons of the year.”

“The memorial ceremony brought back the tragedy of 9/11,” says Chilia. “But it also cemented the bonds between two nations. ‘Carlo de Mas spoke about how his people, defeated in World War II, were liberated by Americans who came out of compassion, not to take tribute.’”
Calif. Broadcasting Pros Vote IBEW

Tom Long hasn’t had a raise in nearly three years.

As a photographer for Fox KTXL-TV in Sacramento, Calif., Long and his co-workers have watched as the station has invested in new vehicles, gear and even a new on-air set. At the same time, staff reporters and newsgatherers have worked increasingly grueling hours for the same pay in one of the region’s most demanding markets.

But that’s all about to change. Long and his co-workers voted overwhelmingly last July to join Hollywood Local 45. The new members are in negotiations with management on a first contract to cover more than three dozen employees at the station.

“Not all unions are created equal,” said Long, who has been with KTXL for 14 years and was active in the organizing drive. Though employees considered talking with other unions over the past few years, “the IBEW was the best fit for what we were looking for and trying to do.”

In May, employees reached out to Local 45 business representative/organizer Hugh McGuigan, who represents members in the northern part of the state.

“People understand that. Plus, our word-of-mouth reputation is strong. We represent three other stations in Sacramento alone, so I’m sure that’s why the Fox employees came to us to see what kind of deal they could get for their skills.”

McGuigan said he anticipates a productive round of negotiations.

“We’ve had continued support and input from these new members about the contract. I told the group from the get-go that this is their agreement. They’ve done a good job of coming forward and participating. They’re a strong group, and they deserve a fair deal from their employer.”

Third District Youth Caucus Rebuilds Homes Damaged by Sandy

One year after Sandy hit land, many residents of the Jersey shore are still struggling to rebuild their homes left in ruins by the devastating Northeast hurricane.

On Sept. 25, more than 50 members of the Third District Youth Caucus, formed in November 2012 by Third District Vice President Don Siegel, volunteered to assist homeowners.

While attending the Third District Progress Meeting in Atlantic City, they lent their efforts to REVIVE, a group assembled to provide coordinated management in the long-term recovery process in Ventnor, a hard-hit beach town.

They rewired two homes and installed drywall in another. All wore T-shirts with the district youth caucus’s logo, “IBEW 3 DYC,” designed by the activists, on the front.

“It was a tremendous day. One of the homeowners—whose husband is legally blind—came out of her house in tears after it was rewired and said she felt like she was being visited by angels,” says Third District International Representative Ellen Redmond. She joined with co-chairs Chris Erickson Jr., New York Local 3, and Tara Chupka, Philadelphia Local 98, to organize the effort. Folsum Local 395 supplied boxed lunches and the IJTyne to transport members from the progress meeting to the worksite.

Chupka helped bring 45 students from Philadelphia Electrical and Technology Charter High School, founded by Local 98, to join the work day. They assisted on beach cleanup.

“The IBEW has been a central part of my life for the past 20 years, which is why the IBEW/3DYC Community Service Project was very rewarding for me,” Chupka said.

“To see firsthand the devastation of Hurricane Sandy, even after all these months, was shocking, and reminded all of us of the fragility of life. To be able to help rehabilitate homes damaged by Sandy was very fulfilling and was a proud day for the IBEW.”

Redmond says youth caucus members were particularly pleased that one of the homes they worked on was owned by a union postal worker, adding a touch of union solidarity to their effort.

“It felt great being part of an organization where I could give back to those that were affected by Hurricane Sandy,” said Nate Peters, co-chair of Long Island, N.Y., Local 1049’s young workers caucus. “It also was an opportunity for me to meet with other IBEW youth members that are just as excited as I am in promoting and strengthening the future of my local union and the IBEW.”

The volunteer effort was a “wonderful thing to see,” says Siegel, who leads progress meeting delegations in a standing ovation for the youth caucus after they returned from the shore. Siegel is looking to establish a relationship between the district and a nationally-recognized nonprofit organization to help stimulate more community engagement activities in local union jurisdictions.

The Third District Youth Caucus was founded in Philadelphia, where 30 young workers and their more senior mentors—business managers and representatives—came together informally for a bowling party and then developed a mission statement. Only the Third and First (Canada) Districts have youth caucuses organized on a district-wide basis, says International Representative Tam Puvapiromqun of the IBEW’s Civic and Community Engagement Department.

Ocasio said that when broadcasting professionals are looking to organize, they often talk with other unions. “But the IBEW really is the best choice,” she said.

“By looking at the quality of the contracts that we negotiate, we have fought to include things like seniority and just cause in ways that other unions haven’t,” Ocasio said. “People understand that. Plus, our word-of-mouth reputation is strong. We represent three other stations in Sacramento alone, so I’m sure that’s why the Fox employees came to us to see what kind of deal they could get for their skills.”

McGuigan said he anticipates a productive round of negotiations.

“We’ve had continued support and input from these new members about the contract. I told the group from the get-go that this is their agreement. They’ve done a good job of coming forward and participating. They’re a strong group, and they deserve a fair deal from their employer.”

New IBEW Broadcasting Site A ‘Virtual Hub’ for Tech Pros

With a history that dates back to the heyday of radio in the 1940s, the IBEW has been in the broadcasting business longer than almost any other organization of its kind.

Now, the union has launched a new Web site—www.IBEWBroadcasting.com—developed to help organize unrepresented camera operators, techs and anyone else looking to advance themselves in the industry.

“We have more than 300 contracts in place for our broadcasting members, many of whom have helped stations and networks win Emmys, Edward R. Murrow Awards and more at both the national and local level,” said Martha Pultar, who directs the Broadcasting and Telecommunications Department. “We have a critical role and influence in the industry, and we have the backing of thousands of members in the business who will stand by their co-workers to help get them the fair treatment they deserve for their talent.”

The site serves a dual purpose—to attract professionals who are looking for the security of a union-negotiated contract, and to establish a “virtual hub” of communication for existing IBEW members.

Visitors can get information about their legal rights to organize and learn about some of the typical roadblocks companies put up to silence workers. A news section serves up industry details and highlights members’ successes, such as a recent profile of audio techs who captured their ninth Emmy Award for their coverage of NASCAR races.

A secure forum allows visitors and members a venue to discuss industry happenings and get quick feedback from IBEW representatives about how joining together with their co-workers can yield tangible benefits.

“If there is one thing the Internet and social media have helped us do, it’s connect people over vast distances,” said Neil Ambrosio, an International Representative from the IBEW’s Broadcasting and Telecommunications Department.

Due to the unique nature of the industry, IBEW broadcasting techs frequently live far away from their home locals. Ambrosio, for example, is a member of Washington, D.C., Local 1200 but lives in Florida.

Manitoba Gets Energy Makeover

The provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan are known for their mineral-rich economies. Now Manitoba, their neighbor on the Canadian prairie, is looking to join them by tapping more fully into its own natural resources to boost economic growth and energy independence.

"Alberta has the oil and Saskatchewan has the potash," says Winnipeg, Manitoba Local 2085 Business Manager Russell Shewchuk.

"Manitoba now has the massive natural resources to boost economic growth and energy independence. Aboriginal people in Manitoba have an unemployment rate four times the non-aboriginal rate. Since 2000, the number of Aboriginal employees at Manitoba Hydro has more than doubled. Local 2085—which represents utility workers at Manitoba Hydro—has 800 Aboriginal members.

"Manitoba now has the massive potential to become an energy giant." Says Manitoba Hydro's two main converter stations.

The goal of provincial leaders and utility officials is not to just keep the province supplied with clean hydro power, but to make Manitoba a major energy exporter throughout North America.

New Democratic Party Hydro Minister Dave Chomiak says the utility is anticipating $29 billion in energy export sales over the next 30 years—contributing to profits which will help pay for the upgrades and new developments.

"Hydro is Manitoba's oil," he said in a statement. "We are building Hydro now to ensure we can provide clean, affordable and renewable energy for not only Manitobans but also for our neighbors in the rest of Canada and the United States."

Export sales commitments have already been inked with Minnesota and Wisconsin energy officials.

And that means work. "The Manitoba Hydro projects will literally create thousands of jobs," says Local 2085's Shewchuk. "We will see millions of man-hours throughout its construction and maintenance. All Manitobans, especially those located in the north, will be granted the opportunity to contribute to the growth of their respective communities."

With the majority of the work being done in northern Manitoba, these projects also mean needed jobs for First Nations communities, which too often have been left out of the province's economic growth. Aboriginal people in Manitoba have an unemployment rate four times the non-aboriginal rate.

The first portion of the project—the Wuskwatim dam—was completed six months ago. The 200-megawatt, run-of-river hydroelectric generating station located in Northern Manitoba put more than 60 Local 2085 members on the job for a four-year period. It is the first northern hydro dam to be built in Manitoba in 20 years.

Construction of the second dam—Keeyask Generating Station located 965 kilometers north of Winnipeg—began earlier this year and is expected at its height to employ more than 250 IBEW wiremen. It will produce 695 megawatts of clean, renewable energy.

The northern converter station will employ more than 90 members. A third station, the Conawapa Generating Station is also planned, which will be the largest in Manitoba history. Manitoba Hydro's new investments are also about bringing the province's expansive electrical infrastructure into the 21st century.

"Much of Manitoba's electrical distribution system dates from the 1940s and '50s and badly needs upgrading. For example, more than 120,000 electrical poles are rotten and need replacing, says Winnipeg Local 2034 Business Manager Mike Velle. More than 20 aged substations also need refurbishment, at an expected cost of more than $650 million."

"This will ensure employment for IBEW members for at least the next decade and in the years to come," Velle says.

The Wuskwatim dam in northern Manitoba was the first hydroelectric project completed as part of Manitoba Hydro’s $20 billion investment plan.

Cure de rajeunissement pour le réseau de production d’énergie au Manitoba

L es provinces de l’Alberta et de la Saskatchewan sont réputées pour leur richesse de leurs ressources minérales. C’est au tour du Manitoba, l’autre province des prairies, de vouloir se joindre à elles en exploitant davantage ses ressources naturelles afin de stimuler la croissance économique et renforcer son indépendance énergétique.

« L’Alberta a le pétrole et la Saskatchewan a la potasse. Tant qu’au Manitoba, il a maintenant un fort potentiel pour devenir un futur géant de l’énergie » dit Russell Shewchuk, Gérant d’affaires de la Section locale 2085 de Winnipeg au Manitoba.

La société d’État Énergie Manitoaba a mis en œuvre un programme d’investissement à long terme de près de 20 milliards de dollars (le plus important investissement en capital de l’histoire de l’entreprise publique) dans la production et la distribution d’électricité pour la modernisation du réseau électrique de la province, incluant les trois projets de construction de barrages hydroélectriques et deux importants postes de conversion.

L’objectif des dirigeants provinciaux et des dirigeants de l’entreprise de services publics est de donner au Manitoba un statut d’important exportateur d’électricité en Amérique du Nord, en plus de s’assurer de fournir à la population de la province une énergie propre.

Le ministre de l’Énergie Dave Chomiak, Nouveau parti démocratique, affirmait que l’entreprise prévoyait des ventes de 20 milliards de dollars à l’exportation au cours des 30 prochaines années et les bénéfices qui en résulteraient serviraient à payer pour les améliorations du réseau et les nouveaux développements hydroélectriques.

« L’électricité est le pétrole du Manitoba. Nous construisons ces aménagements maintenant afin de pouvoir fournir à tous les Manitobains ainsi qu’à nos voisins du reste du Canada et des États-Unis, une énergie propre, renouvelable, à des prix abordables » a-t-il déclaré dans un communiqué.

Des accords en matière de ventes à l’exportation ont déjà été signés avec les responsables gouvernementaux en matière d’énergie du Minnesota et du Wisconsin.

Cela représente beaucoup d’emplois pour nos membres.

« Cela fera en sorte qu’il y aura de nouveaux emplois pour les membres de la Fraternité durant la prochaine décennie au moins et dans les années à venir » ajoute-t-il.

Les membres de la FOE travaillent également sur le projet de ligne de transmission Bipolaire III (500,000 volts) qui relie le nord et le sud de la province et qui renforce la capacité de transport de l’électricité afin de pouvoir supporter la charge additionnelle générée par les nouveaux projets hydroélectriques.

« Ces projets de construction offriront plusieurs avantages aux Manitobains en multipliant, entre autres, les possibilités d’emploi pour les membres de la FOE. Il est évident que la croissance de la FOE et de la société Hydro-Manitoba continuera de contribuer largement à notre économie » conclut le confrère Velie.
C. James Spellane

IBEW Media Department Director C. James “Jim” Spellane has been appointed Media Advisor by International President Edwin D. Hill, effective Nov. 1. “Jim Spellane has made an immense contribution to the IBEW’s reputation and public profile,” says International President Edwin D. Hill. “I am happy that he has agreed to accept the task of overseeing all of the IBEW’s public media efforts to put a real face on the IBEW membership as we address challenges facing our members in all of our industries in the months ahead.”

A native of Abington, Pa., and a member of Philadelphia Local 98, Brother Spellane began working at the IBEW in 1993 as International Representative for public relations, appointed by International President J.J. Barry. He had previously served as communications director for the Laborers’ International Union of North America and as research director for the National Treasury Employees Union.

Since his appointment as director in 1999, the Media Department, formerly the Journal Department, has grown into one of the labor movement’s most respected communications organizations. Spellane’s multifaceted skills have been put to wide use in the IBEW’s far-reaching communications program. He helped usher the IBEW into the digital age of online and social media and he helped bring high-level video production in-house, launching the IBEW into the rooms nationwide through the national ad campaign. The IBEW Journal and The Electrical Worker, which succeeded it in 2007, have been frequent recipients of awards for excellence by the International Labor Communications Association. The Electrical Worker takes the name of the union’s original newspaper, first published in 1935.

Spellane has helped the union’s broadcast quality studio, completed in 2011, and organized labor advocates for progressive leadership of local unions. The IBEW’s perspective on major issues from utility industry deregulation to the Affordable Care Act is sought out and respected by mainstream media sources. Spellane’s responsibilities included overseeing the rebuilding of IBEW’s museum and archives that the union moved into its newest quarters in 2005. The IBEW’s Historic papers and other documents are preserved in modern facilities and the museum uses contemporary technology and engaging interactive exhibits to tell the union’s story.

Before working for LIUNA, Spellane was vice president of the Kamber Group, a Washington D.C.-based public relations firm, where he developed communications strategies for several union clients and wrote major speeches for a number of labor leaders. Brother Spellane, who holds a B.A. in Communications from American University in Washington, D.C., lives in Washington with his wife Susan Noon. His daughter, Nora, is a college student in Minnesota.

The IBEW officers, staff and membership wish Brother Spellane all the best in his new position.

Mark Brueggenjohann

Mark Brueggenjohann, International Representative, IBEW Media Department, has been promoted to interim director of effective Nov. 1. Brueggenjohann replaces C. James Spellane, who has been promoted to IBEW Media Advisor. The Media Department is responsible for producing the IBEW’s official publication, creating video and text news stories and other content for the IBEW’s Web site, dealing with the press, working with the international officers to shape the IBEW’s message, administering the museum and archives at the international office and working with other departments on communications-related activities, campaigns and special projects.

“Jim Spellane left us with a great department,” says Brueggenjohann. “Our task is to keep staying up with and ahead of how IBEW members are getting information, creating content that fits their media usage.”

A native of St. Louis, Brueggenjohann was initiated into the city’s radio and television broadcasting Local 4 in 1982. He began work in that industry in 1979 while a student at Tulsa University. Returning to St. Louis, Brueggenjohann worked for KFLR, a family-owned independent TV station as an engineer, editor and news photographer. Three years later, after his hiring by KTVI, Brueggenjohann began an 18-year stretch that combined photography news and promotions, editing and engineering with union activism.

A one-time Emmy winner with more than 10 nominations, Brueggenjohann has also been honored with the Champion-Tuck Award for economic coverage from Dartmouth College and the Unity Award for diversity reporting. In 1996, Brueggenjohann volunteered to join Local 4’s negotiating committee. He served as chairman of the executive board and shop steward for several years until his appointment as business manager in 2004, replacing Mike Pendergast, who was promoted to Broadcasting Director in Washington, D.C. Active in the community, Brueggenjohann served on the executive board of the North County Labor Legislative Club, an influential political player in St. Louis.

“My biggest challenge as business manager,” says Brueggenjohann, “was the need to protect members’ jobs as the industry moved from analog technology to digital video. We focused on bargaining with employers to keep bargaining for members on non-traditional work.”

“We brought producers, directors and assignment editors into the bargaining unit and kept all St. Louis coverage of major league baseball, hockey and football in union hands,” says Brueggenjohann. Appointed International Representative in the Media Department in 2007, Brueggenjohann brought professionalism and planning to IBEW’s video productions. With his assistance, the union has produced award-winning, broadcast-quality videos and national ads.

The opening of the union’s new studio in 2011 placed the IBEW in the center of the one of the most innovative and high-quality video production operations in the U.S. labor movement.

Brueggenjohann lives in Washington, D.C. and enjoys motorycycling and photography.

On behalf of the entire membership and staff, the officers wish Brother Brueggenjohann great success in his new position.

LeRoy ‘Keith’ Edwards

LeRoy ‘Keith’ Edwards, Ninth District International Representative, was promoted to effective Nov. 1. Brother Edwards was the first elected African-American business manager of an inside construction local. He was initiated into Portland, Ore., Local 48 in August 1970, finishing his apprenticeship in 1977. He was hired as a local 48 all-business representative in 1990 and in 1996 became the assistant business manager.

In 2000, when then-Business Manager Gerald Bruce resigned to become an International Representative, Brother Edwards was appointed to the position by the local’s executive council. Dan Gardner, International Representative in the Political and Legislative Department, was a member of the council and supported Edwards’ ascension.

“He was the most experienced, but he was also very calm, very cool. He seeks advice and hears more than just about anyone I’ve ever met, and then he makes his decision and runs with it,” Gardner said. Cllf Davis, business development International Representative and Local 48 business manager from St Louis, says from 2017 to 2023, said Edwards led a dramatic change within the local.

“We’d had some contentious times and he calmed things down,” Davis said. “He knew how to collaborate and doesn’t create factions.”

What drove Edwards, said Carolyn Williams, Director of the Civic and Community Engagement Department, was an abiding belief that the labor movement was for everyone.

“He was a role model for women and minorities, but there’s no book on how you move up or even into the IBEW for anybody,” she said. “He was a mentor for lots of people, not just minorities, because you felt comfortable talking about your struggles and knew he would give you good counsel.”

Many of those relationships developed while Edwards was on the executive board of the Electrical Workers Minority Caucus between 1993-2002. Williams said Edwards’ rise through the ranks changed what many people thought was possible.

“At that time, being on staff at a local was unusual, so having a black man in that position gave people a sense that, ‘Hey, I can do that,’” she said.

In 2003 Ninth District International Vice President Clif Davis hired Edwards to become an International Representative servicing the four Oregon construction locals and continuing his mission to make the IBEW more inclusive.

“Being a business manager is the toughest job in the IBEW and you need friends—people who understand what you’re doing and can help. It’s critical,” Davis said. “He is the model for me and many others of how to be a good leader and help bring out the best in ourselves.”

On behalf of the entire IBEW membership and staff, the officers wish Brother Edwards a long, healthy and rewarding retirement.

Paul J. Ward

Second District International Representative Paul J. Ward retired effective Nov. 1. Brother Ward, a former business manager of Boston Local 103, served on the International Executive Council for three years. He was appointed in 1997 to fill the unexpired term of Frank J. Carroll Jr., who was appointed Second District Vice President.

Ward joined the local labor movement in 1968, Ward was a winner of the 1977 Founders’ Scholarship. He returned to college after completing his inside wireman apprenticeship. He graduated with honors from Boston College School of Law in 1981.

After launching Local 103’s first political action fund in 1976, Ward served as the local’s legal counsel and business representative, arguing numerous cases before the NLRB and the courts in support of the local’s organizing efforts.

“I come from a long line of union movement activists,” Ward said. His grandfather was business manager of a brewery’s union local. His father was an American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees leader.

Ward’s union roots have continued to spread. His son, Paul Jr., is a member of Local 103 who works as a project manager and estimator. His daughter, Elise, is business manager for Local 104, where his brother, Bob, once served as business manager. Another daughter, Andrea, is a special education teacher.

Appointed International Representative in 2000, Brother Ward served locals representing members in construction, railroads and paper mills.

“In construction, we were faced with the ups and downs of markets. In railroad, we had to see that our members’ rights were protected. But the most challenging job was in the paper mills,” he said. “The paper industry was in flux. I found that the companies that remained owned by paper enterprises fared far better than the ones that were owned by venture capitalists. We had to be flexible in bargaining, while standing up for our members and not conceding too much.”

In retirement, Ward says he hopes to spend more time with his six grandchildren, volunteer for a nonprofit group with which he has maintained a long relationship and perform some pro bono legal work.

“I am excited about the young worker program being developed by the IBEW,” says Ward. He says the differences between his generation and today’s young workers entering the union’s ranks are more pronounced.
DECEASED

James Dushaw

The IBEW is saddened to report the Oct. 25, 2013, death of retired Utility Department Director James Dushaw. He was 72.

A Pittsburgh native, Brother Dushaw was initiated into Local 149 as a clerical worker at Duquesne Power and Light Co. Local 149 was one of six locals representing Duquesne employees which merged to form Local 29 in 1999.

A few years later he became a lineman with the company. He served in numerous union positions, including shop steward, executive board member, vice president and safety committee chairman.

The dangerous nature of line work moved Dushaw to become active around safety issues. He played a leading role in winning legislation in Pennsylvania prohibiting utility employers from forcing employees to use exceptionally high voltage work methods. In 1979 then-International President Charles Pillard appointed Dushaw an International Representative in the Utility Department.

He analyzed utility contracts, working conditions and safety standards. He also served on the American National Standards Institute Electric Safety Code Committee and several other national standards committees.

In 1989, then-International President J.J. Barry appointed Dushaw to the position of director of the Utility Department of the AFL-CIO.

He helped develop the IBEW’s recommendations for new OSHA standards in the utility industry. He also initiated a federal investigation into chemical exposure of workers at Westinghouse manufacturing plants.

In 1995, he was appointed Utility Department director, helping lead the IBEW during the height of the energy deregulation push.

“What do you call a union that conspires with employers to stop another union from organizing? That negotiates wage packages that are 10 to 50 percent less than other union shops?”

In Ontario, Canada, it’s called the Christian Labour Association of Canada, and for years it has prevented workers at JMR Construction—from a provincial-wide construction company—from having a real voice on the job.

Now the 300 JMR Construction workers have a choice. On Oct. 25, the open period for JMR Construction employees to switch unions began, and three members of the building trades—the IBEW, the Sheet Metal Workers, and the Plumbers—are working together to organize JMR employees.

“We’ve really come together, running a professional campaign from top to bottom,” said London Local 120 Business Manager Paul Dolsen. Under Ontario labour law, construction workers have the opportunity to switch unions every three years. During a three-month open period, any union that can get the majority of employees at a given company signed up is certified as the sole collective bargaining agent.

The building trades’ campaign is a combination of door knocking and worksite visits and sophisticated online public relations.

“Twenty-eight full-time organizers from the three trades are hitting worksites throughout Ontario with informational fliers, holding one-on-one discussions with workers.

The Web site includes videos and interactive graphics showcasing the benefit of joining the building trades. These include higher wages, a better pension and more training opportunities:

• In London, IBEW electricians make $8.75 (Canadian currency) more an hour than their CLAC counterparts.

• JMR Construction only pays approximately 5 percent above for employees’ pensions. With the building trades, employers contribute on average between 12 and 18 percent.

• Most of CLAC’s training focuses on safety. The IBEW offers advanced training in more than 20 different areas, including solar and communications wiring.

The site also hosts video testimonials from former CLAC members at JMR.

“Joining the building trades was one of the best decisions I’ve made,” said Local 120 member Gary Creek, who joined the IBEW last June. “When CLAC was my union, I felt like I was paying union dues, but getting nothing for it.”

The building trades tried organizing JMR six years ago, but management brought in CLAC to head it off.

“The owner basically told employees if they didn’t go with CLAC, he was going to close up shop,” said John Grimshaw, executive secretary-treasurer of the IBEW Construction Council of Ontario.

CLAC’s reputation for weak contracts and its refusal to provide genuine representation to members has created dissatisfaction among employees. Particularly galling was CLAC’s recent agreement, which let the company force workers to move to Thunder Bay—approximately 900 miles northwest of Toronto—for a job.

“Basically, we were told that if we did not take the deal CLAC negotiated, we would be treated as taking a voluntary layoff,” Creek said. “We might or might not be called back to work.”

CLAC has also refused to push for overtime pay.

“If you are going to pay dues, why not actually get something for your money?” said Grimshaw. The open-period closes Dec. 31. To learn more about the campaign go to www.abetterdeal.ca.

Wis. IBEW Leaders Open High Schoolers’ Eyes to Building Trades

You hear it from the mouths of young people every day: I can’t afford college.

The debt would be too big. I’m not sure what to do.

Clay Tschillard is working to allay those fears and offer some hope for high schoolers in Wisconsin. The Madison Local 159 member is part of a team that launched the new “Trade Up” program—an initiative that offers students an up-close look at the building trades and helps pave the way for job growth.

“We want students to know that there are other options that lead to quality careers, without the student loan debt,” said Tschillard, the apprenticeship coordinator for the state’s NATEC program.

The campaign developed a year ago when IBEW instructors started talking with area high school career counselors about the viability of apprenticeships. In the past, Tschillard said, career counseling has focused solely on a four-year college degree, to the exclusion of many other options. “This is one of the first times they’re come to us and asked, ‘Can you show these kids what you have to offer?’” Tschillard said.

Trade Up launched at 21 high schools in October in districts across the south central part of the state. The campaign includes curriculum, fliers, an Interactive Web site featuring apprenticeship testimonials, videos and more for school advertisers. The multimedia teaching tools were produced by the area’s Workforce Development Board.

The IBEW is one of several unions participating—including the sheet metal workers, plumbers, laborers, bricklayers, ironworkers and painters and drywall finishers.

Trade Up is already scoring positive marks from many school counselors.

“You’ve got a perfect storm of people talking about college debt,” said Greg Benz, the school-to-career coordinator for Waunakee High School. “If it’s successful in raising awareness, I could see it replicated throughout the state.”
A Strong Union Turnout

L.U. 8 (si,em,macn,ltst,s&kpa), TOLEDO, OH—Local 8 hosted another successful Labor Day parade and picnic this year. Many political candidates attended seeking support from the approximately 500 members and their families present. AFL-CIO Sec.-Treas. Elizabeth Schuler, former executive assistant to the IBEW International President, also attended and addressed the crowd on the struggling economy.

In August, Bro. Charlie Condon stepped down as our Michigan business agent after 22 years of service. Charlie has served on many boards, committees and delegations. Although he hasn’t officially retired just yet, Charlie is enjoying a much-deserved break. Robert Cousino was appointed to fill the vacated position as business agent. Best wishes to both Charlie and Robert.

The members Christmas party will be held immediately after the December 16 meeting. We look forward to a great turnout. Please contact Rick Jackson if you are interested in assisting with the party.

Local 8 officers and staff wish everyone a safe, happy holiday season and a prosperous 2014.

IBEW Booth at State Fair

L.U. 12 (o,cs), PUEBLO, CO—You know the end of summer has arrived when the Colorado State Fair comes to town. Our local has set up a Mexican Food Booth every year since 1993. Journeymen, apprentices and family members volunteer their time so the proceeds can go to help support our apprenticeship program. Many brothers and sisters from other locals stop in to say hello as well as local politicians. We don’t make a lot of money but the visibility in our community makes it worth the effort. Big thanks to all who helped again this year.

Solidarity & Activism

L.U. 16 (i), EVANSVILLE, IN—Local 16 was well-represented by approximately 150 marchers at the 127th Annual Labor Day Parade. This year’s theme of “American by birth, union by choice” was selected to help keep the ongoing battle against so-called “right-to-work” legislation in the public view. After the parade, several IBEW locals shared an excellent meal. Thanks to everyone who pitched in to make the celebration possible.

The Brotherhood’s family picnic in early September was also a great success. Members enjoyed food, games, door prizes and catching up on old friendships. Once again, numerous volunteers stepped up to make the day a great one.

After more than four years, three previous suits, countless contentious meetings and political bickering versus overwhelming popular support, it now appears that Evansville will finally be building a full-service convention hotel. This would not have been possible without the mayor’s promotion, local businesses’ willingness to increase their funding, and the constant backing by union leadership and members. We hope that by this time next year, the hotel will be a beautiful addition to the city’s skyline.

Awards Banquet a Success

L.U. 34 (em,ltst,kpa), PEORIA, IL—Local 34 wishes happy holidays to all IB EW members. The fall season was rougher than we expected. As of this writing, the number of members on book one had steadily increased in recent months. We hope as we celebrate the beginning of a new year we will also usher in a more prosperous year for our members. 2014 will also be an election year and as always we need to support our Democratic Party candidates by volunteering throughout the year and voting to elect worker-friendly officials.

Our annual Holiday Awards Banquet in November was a wonderful success. Attendees ranged from first-year apprentices to members with 50 or more years in the trade. There were many conversations about how things have changed in the trades over the past 50-60 years. Solidarity among members is still strong in Local 34.

Two longtime members recently passed away: Bros. Henry Day and Earl Burdette. These brothers had more than 500 years of combined service and they will be missed.

Work Picture Update

L.U. 38 (i), CLEVELAND, OH—The work picture has slowed down since completion of the new convention center; however, because of the new convention center and attached Medical Mart, construction plans are high. Construction of the County Administration Building has begun on East 9th and Prospect in conjunction with development of the former Ametrust site. The Amettrust Tower is being converted into hotel and apartment space; the attached Rotunda and 1010 building are being converted into retail and apartment space. This large renovation is just getting started and will employ many of our members. Zenith and Ullman Electric are currently on-site.

Relocation of the County Administration building will open up that space for a new 700-room hotel. The construction manager will be picked soon so that construction can start there in 2014.

Apartment occupancy is at about 97 percent in downtown Cleveland and construction is just starting on two more buildings being converted into 450 more units. Gateway Electric is on-site at the East Ohio Gas Building and at the Schofield Building. Phase 2 of the East Bank Flats was awarded to Panida Construction, and electrical bids for the new apartments and restaurants will be bid soon. The Cleveland Clinic and University Hospitals have multiple projects just getting started so we expect work to pick up in 2014.

Local Lines are printed monthly on an alternating even/odd schedule. They can be submitted by designated press secretaries or union officers via e-mail (locallines@ibew.org) or U.S. Mail. We have a 200-word limit. We make every effort to assist local unions in publishing useful and relevant local union news; however, all final content decisions are based on the editor’s judgment. Chicopee, MA. (The photo published in the October issue was taken at the jobsite where Par Electric and Local 42 crews are working on a New England East-West Solution transmission project; that NEWS jobsite photo was proudly provided to us by Local 42 member Jeffrey Sylvester.)

Local 42’s work picture looks good. We are currently putting Local 42 “M” members out to work for the substation and highway. We are slowly starting to put people out for distribution. The outlook for the future is promising as well. At press time, it was expected that one or two highline projects would start in mid-October 2013. If all goes as planned, we should be able to clear our books.

Mark your calendars for upcoming events for next year. In 2014, Local 42 will celebrate its 40th year anniversary at our Dinner Dance/Apprentice Graduation on April 26. Also scheduled for 2014 are: a Trap Shoot on May 3; Motorcycle Run on May 17; Dinner Cruise on June 14; Chartered Fishing Trip on July 12; “BA” Picnic on July 26; and “M” Member Picnic on Aug. 23.

IBEW Community Service

Local 58 (em,utb,spak), DETROIT, MI—When people think of union members, they rarely know of the good we do in our communities. It is not because we are not doing good things; we just don’t tell our story. Local 58 has been working to change that. We have been finding the things our members are already doing to serve their communities, and putting a union face on them. This summer we had 150 volunteers attend a habitat for Humanity Blitz Build. As of October, we began collecting for a new charity at each monthly meeting (canned food, toys, etc.). Donations may also be made anywhere at the union hall. I encourage everyone to contact their local, get their members to help, and then tell their story of community service to news outlets.

For the past 12 years, the Local 58 Benevolent Fund has hosted the Ken Fitzhenry Party on Super Bowl Sunday. It is our biggest fundraiser of the year, with all proceeds going to assist our members in their time of need. With the help of an all-volunteer crew we are able to feed the 200-plus who attend. The food is fresh and made from scratch, although many believe it to be a catered event. For the 2014 party we are raffling off seven flat-screen high-definition televisions: two 51” HDTV’s, one 43” HDTV and four 32” HDTVs.

Happy holidays to everyone from Local 58.

Andy Dunbar, Pres.

IBEW Local 102 (em,govt,i,mt,o&ws), PATERSON, NJ—Our JATC continues to build on its solid foundation and once again we turned to our friends at Union County College, home to our Associate Degree Program for apprentices. UCC and Local 102 have rolled out a continuing education program featuring more than 100 courses specifically picked for Local 102. The JATC didn’t stop there as they partnered with Vubiz, an IBEW partner, to provide 173 online courses.

We hope all of our members take advantage of this great opportunity to further their education.

Training for our Local 102/CPAUL partnership is well underway. To date, more than 200 members have gone through “HazResponder Training.” The partnership provides more work opportunities for our brothers and sisters—but most importantly, it provides us the opportunity to work with Jersey City Power & Light to better serve the citizens of New Jersey during major storms.

Education is the foundation of the IBEW; it’s what separates us from our competitors. The JATC is driven to seek out new venues for diversified training opportunities. We are currently working with the New Jersey Institute of Technology (NJIT) on several ideas. Please check our Web site www.ibewlocal102.org for updates and sign up for our e-blasts to keep updated on all local union news.

“IBEW Lights in the Park”

L.U. 110 (em,utb,spak), ST. PAUL, MN—The work picture continues to look better for our jurisdiction. Both refineries are putting many of our members to work. Remember to have all of your certifications and license documentation with you in order to work on these projects.

We continue to banner companies that use contractors who don’t pay their employees area contact with those still working there to ensure that E&P follows through with this and also reports its prevailing wage projects correctly. The election may not have gone union, but 25 electricians were exposed to the good that the IBEW does. Thanks to Bro. Larry Shaffer, who worked as a salt, for his efforts in the campaign.

The annual Local 80 picnic was held Sept. 28. Once again, it was a success! Many thanks to Bro. Woody Gregory and his wife, Petra, for all their work on this event. Congratulations to Bro. Mike Peluso and his son-in-law Collin for winning the annual horseshoe tournament.

Spirit of Brotherhood

L.U. 82 (em,mutb&sp), DAVTON, OH—Friends, family and Local 82 members came together to raise money to assist Bros. Dave Serrill and Dave Woolf-Isbell in their fight against cancer. A crowd of 500-plus people came to Local 82 to show their support and reach into their wallets to help raise $20,000 in five hours. It wasn’t just money that was donated but also baskets of food, items to raffle and a lot of manpower that was needed to make the night a success! Thanks go to everyone who attended and to the volunteers who made this possible. We ask for thoughts and prayers for our brothers in their time of need and one day a cure.

Doug Searcy, P.S.

Local 82 saw a strong turnout and a great spirit of brotherhood at benefit.

2013 Apprentice Graduates

L.U. 100 (em,utb,spak), FRESNO, CA—Congratulations to the apprentice graduating class of 2013: Timothy Brockelhurst, Adrian Ceballos, Derek Chapman, Joshua Fleming, Refugio Gamez, Darrell Goodpaster, Robert Majeske, Christopher McManus, Matthew Miller, Sundara Powell, Kiel Raeber, Gabriel Rodriguez, Miguel Sanchez, Byron Sanders, Douglas Sorenson and Sibeuy Xaychareun. Joshua Fleming will represent Local 100 at the Western States Competition in San Diego.

Local 100 has 26 first-year apprentices, with a large increase in applications for apprenticeship. The JATC is offering continuing education for the California State certification. Check your certification expiration date!

Recently elected Local 100 officers are: Bus. Mgr. Kevin Cole, Pres. Stefan Davis, Vice Pres. Chris Howell, Rec. Sec. Chuck Stanton, Treas. Ronny Jang; Executive Board members Lou Gutierrez, Scott Farmer, Michael Caglia; and Examining Board members

Local 80 (em,utb,sp), NORFOLK, VA—The recent organizing campaign that Local 80 conducted at E&P Electric was taken to a vote. Unfortunately, the vote did not go the way we hoped. We did, however, organize several of E&P’s key employees, who have been sworn in and are now IBEW members. We also stripped several of the company’s helpers and have slotted them into our apprenticeship program. E&P has now raised its raises to its employees and promised a benefits package. We will continue to be in standards. Our fantastic banner carriers continue to show the public that IBEW Local 110 stands up for our standards and wages.

Once again this year, we wired five habitat for Humanity homes in our jurisdiction. All done free of charge for some families in need. Thank you to all of our fantastic volunteers who have helped IBEW 110 build better communities every day!

Our annual IBEW Lights in the Park will once again happen this holiday season. Last year we donated more than $80,000 to four charities from this great holiday event.

JW Upgrade Classes
L.U. 234, (Am), CASTROVILLE, CA—At our annual BBQ, held Oct. 3 this year, 65-year members Leland Krisley and Ray Sahlberg were honored. Likewise we honored our 60-year members: Richard Baker, Robert Koenig, Siegfried Matt, Donald Moore and James Myers. This is our annual occasion to recognize members’ years of devoted service. Thank you to all who participated and helped make the event a great success.

Our local in conjunction with our contractors proudly offers Journeyman Wireman Upgrade classes relevant to our ever advancing electrical construction industry. Some examples include classes on the NEC changes, offered monthly by instructor David Martinez; CPR & First Aid; the newly rolled out EVTP-3; and, particularly to California, the CalCTP Acceptance Testing. The aforementioned training offers our electricians an opportunity to certify that the advanced lighting controls systems mandated by the California Title 24 energy code have been installed and are operating as designed. This reflects our ongoing commitment to supporting the responsible utilization of energy-saving technologies as they become available and are installed by our members for their customers.

The first-year goal for the fundraiser, as set by the apprentices, was $3,000; with the help of many sponsors’ logos. Special thanks to the following for their support and hospitality: Bus. Mgrs. Bill Riley, Local 349; Randall King, Local 95; Bob Carr, Local 606; and Russell Harper, Jacksonville Local 177.

All proceeds raised from the Labor Day Bike Run were donated to The Children of Saint Jude’s Hospital on behalf of the IBEW. We thank all participants and look forward to next year’s Labor Day Bike Run.

Willy Dezyayas, Org.

From water treatment plants, chemical and industrial facilities to hospitals, schools and data centers, our contractors have been getting the jobs and our members are going back to work. We thank our brothers and sisters to the north, Local 48 and Local 112 for putting so many of our members to work during our slow times last summer and fall. Local 280 wishes everyone a happy and healthy holiday season! We are confident that we will see this New Year, the future for Local 280 and the IBEW will be bright and prosperous.

JATC Graduation Ceremony
L.U. 292 (em, gvt, rts&spa), MINNEAPOLIS, MN—On Sept. 26, the Minneapolis JATC held a graduation ceremony at Jax Café, a Local 17 Unele Here restaurant. The banquet celebrated 308 graduates from the 2012 and 2013 classes. A riveting keynote speech was delivered by John M. Kriesel, his book, “Still Standing: The Story of SSG John Kriesel,” describes his National Guard service as a squad leader in Iraq, a roadside explosion that took two of his buddies and both of his legs, his time as a Minnesota state representative, and his new found focus on his family.

Top apprentice awards for 2013 went to Justin Nogle and Chad Claypool. The 2012 awards went to Jason Guibranson and Aaron Oasbrough.

On Aug. 22-23, Local 292 held an “area standards fringe benefits” workshop at the Hennepin County Call Center—a new $32 million, 59,000-square-foot emergency communications center built by Stahl Construction. Stahl is using Vinco Electric Inc., a nonunion contractor that has been found in violation of Minnesota’s prevailing wage laws and fails to pay area standard wages and benefits.

We have 535 members on the out-of-work book for inside construction, but optimism reigns with many large projects planned for 2014. Thank you to all the locals that have provided work for our traveling brothers and sisters.

Carl Madsen, P.S./B.R.

Looking Ahead
L.U. 266 (cat, ves, em, ves, i, mu, mt, rts&spa), SALEM, OR—Work continues to improve in Oregon, but the process has been painfully slow. Questions about the Affordable Care Act, the stability of the economy, construction market. Investors and businesses continue to hold on tightly to their finances, waiting for more certainty in their investments.

Nevertheless, even with very few projects to bid, Local 280 continues to secure sizable projects within our jurisdiction.
Solidarity Ride
L.U. 300 (govt.,lmt,mt,rs,spa), MONTPELIER, VT—Vermont politics got in the way this year when vast and current efforts to close Vermont Yankee nuclear power station came to fruition. It is unfortunate that our senior political leadership can’t see the impact on middle-class people.

Local 300’s 332 sisters took off on their motorcycles with a rumble and rolled along scenic roads of Vermont on a fall day to enjoy good friends and good food. The rally was created to help Local 300 members who require assistance. Because of utility outage projects, the number of participants was somewhat down; however we look forward to “running with the bulls” in 2014. Special thanks to Wilkins Harley-Davidson in Barre, VT, for its support and humble hospitality.

The Local 300 office staff wishes local members, and all IBEW members, a safe and happy holiday season. Be safe and enjoy. Cheers!

Jeffrey C. Wilmette, B.M./F.S.

‘Telling Our Story’ — & Building Advocates
L.U. 302 (ltsk,spa), MARTINEZ, CA—Thirty years ago, our local controlled more than 90 percent of the electrical work in our jurisdiction. Today, that number is closer to 30 percent.

It used to be unusual to see a nonunion contractor’s truck on the road. Today, it is the union contractor vehicles that are the anomaly. In many ways, we became victims of our own success. We treated the work as if it belonged to us. We became complacent. Those days are hopefully behind us.

Today, we engage politically within our communities. We are once again telling our story, making our case. As we make our voices heard, we are creating advocates rather than adversaries.

For the common good, “highly skilled” must replace “lower-cost” as the best choice. And as we realize that the skilled nonunion worker is one simply who has not yet been organized, we realize that the skilled nonunion worker is one simply who has not yet been organized. We are creating advocates rather than adversaries.

Sports Stadium Construction
L.U. 312 (ees,es,lsk), SAN JOSE, CA—Construction on the new home of the San Francisco 49ers is on schedule to be completed by July 2014. This new stadium will feature state-of-the-art technology made possible by the electrical industry.

The former head of our South Bay AFL-CIO Labor Council, Cindy Chavez, ran a very important and strongly contested race for Santa Clara County Supervisor. Her opponent was well-funded by the Chamber of Commerce and the California Republican Party. We’re very proud to say that with the help of many IBEW locals in California, and of course the contributions of IBEW Local 332 sisters and brothers, Cindy Chavez won her race and we have one more good friend in local politics.

In solidarity.
David Bini, Org.

Going Green
L.U. 340 (ltsk,spa), SACRAMENTO, CA—Going green — everyone is doing it today. Even this publication can be received via e-mail rather than via U.S. Postal Service, saving trees, time and money. Just go to www.ibew.org and click on “Go Green.” We here at Local 340 are offering our members the same “green” choice and we’re in the process of updating to a more interactive and member-friendly Web site.

Meeting the “know,” I recommend you regularly visit the I.O. Web site www.ibew.org. The information is fresh and varied, reporting on wide-ranging topics including scholarship news, jobline information, etc.; recent video topics include “Bringing Back Jobs,” the “Affordable Care Act” and much more.

Between the I.O. Web site and the information that I, as business manager, have received as a result of the IBEW/Political and Legislative Affairs Congress in September, it is apparent we are gearing up for a healthy, robust political battle in 2014. Local 340 will be active in keeping working families’ issues in the forefront. To be in the know, I recommend you regularly visit the I.O. Web site, as well as our local’s own Web site www.ibewlocal340.org to stay informed on political topics and labor-friendly candidates. Also, members who do opt to receive e-mail mailings will help save the local time and money next year during the elections.

Rest in peace, Bro. Robert Deli and Bro. Howard Shirley (father of member Mark Shirley).

Tom Okumura, B.M.

Organizing Campaign
L.U. 364 (catv,ees,em,es,lm,ltsk,spa), ROCKFORD, IL—At this writing, we’re working with a group of employees of Greenlee Tool in Gena, IL, to organize the workers there. Our NLRB representation election was initially delayed due to the Republican government shutdown. However, we anticipate victory and as of this writing the representation election was scheduled for Oct. 30. [Ed. Note: Election results were not yet available at press time.]

We’re proud to recognize two distinguished organizers from IBEW Local 1245, Tom Sink and Lisa Bradley, Scott Reed, Brick Cline, Bruce Lowman and Forrest Andrews.

Apprenticeship Graduates
L.U. 464 (ml), COVINGTON, VA—On Dec. 14, 2012, a graduation ceremony was held at Danby S. Lancaster Community College in Clifton Forge, VA, for eight apprentices of MeadWestvaco’s Electrical Apprentice program. The ceremony marked a milestone for these men and women as graduates and also marked their transition to full membership in IBEW Local 464.

The eight graduates successfully completed a challenging schedule over the last four years ranging from on-the-job training to after-hours classroom education. One of the graduates commented, “It was tough at times, but the rewards outweighed the pains. Our IBEW brothers and sisters had survived the same [and that] was motivation enough for us.”

Stepping Into the 21st Century
L.U. 320 (ltsk), AUSTIN, TX—The Austin Electrical JATC has a new director, Jim Stricklan. Though not an electrician by trade, he has a long history when it comes to vocational training. Since being named as director, he has been busy bringing the JATC into the 21st Century by getting our facility “up to speed” in terms of technology. The development of a computer lab—enabling apprentices, CWCE and journeymen to take part in the blended learning as well as online classes—was his priority.

Connecting all the classrooms to the Internet and training of the instructors is taking place, assuring that the future is secure and it is now. He is also looking to upgrading and developing curriculum for our CWCE. This fall the first Tele Data Training program begins. In partnering with Klein Tools and 3M products, our hands-on training will be top of the line; and Jim’s desire is that eventually 60 percent of the time spent in training at the JATC will be dedicated to “hands-on” experiences.

Welcome aboard and good luck in the future, Jim.

Local Union Highlights
L.U. 558 (catv,comm,lmt, rs,rtb,spa,rs,spa), SHEFFIELD, AL—Local 558 had an extremely busy summer this year. Due to inclement weather, our 4th Annual Spring Picnic was postponed to Aug. 10. This event is one of the highlights of the year for our local. Our active and retired members and their families enjoy the opportunity to come together in a relaxed atmosphere and have a good time.

IBEW Local 558 was recognized at the Shoals Labor Day Rally as the top donor again this year.

Local 464 electrical apprenticeship graduates: Tim Walton (left), Brian Campbell, Shane Wolfe, Lisa Bradley, Scott Reed, Brick Cline, Bruce Lowman and Forrest Andrews.
reportedly the longest running Labor Day rally in the U.S., at 91 consecutive years. Several local and state officials attended; they spoke on the conditions of our state and nation, and also expressed appreciation for continued support from organized labor.

Work has been somewhat stable as of the summer. The Toyota Motor Manufacturing engine plant in Huntsville, AL, is approaching the final stages of completion. At the time of this writing, we are close to filling calls at the newly constructed Jack Daniels facility in Decatur, AL.

Congratulations to our 2013 lineman apprenticeship class. The lineman graduates are: Timothy Forrester, Joel Cole, Jason Borden, David Scott, Tyler Pace, Preston Parker and Zachary Tubbs. Special recognition goes to Tim Forrester on being named Outstanding Apparance Lineman.

Tony Quillen, Pres./A.B.M.

Fourth Quarter Update
L.U. 570 (uno,spa&k), TUCSON, AZ—Newly elected officers are stepping up to the plate to ensure the success of Local 570. Int. Rep. Debra Harter came to Tucson to facilitate Leadership Training and Trial Board Training for new and returning officers.

Local 570 officers are: Bus. Mgr. Mike Verbout, Pres. Scott Toof, Vice Pres. Jon Stevens, Sec. Rec. Bob Reynolds, Treas. Clinton Ponder-Gilby; Executive Board members Mark Watson, Chris Brevick, Jim Lynch, Pete Richey, Mike Pugh; and Examining Board members Bob Croslard, Chris Salazar, Russell Wins, Justin Shipley, Donald T. Berry and Anthony Snyder. [Photo below, at left.]

Our Annual Golf tournament in August raised more than $4,200 for Reading Seed Children’s Literacy Program. Local 570 won the Union Olympics at the Annual Pima Area Labor Federation (PALF) Labor Day Picnic.

The local has offered continued support for Rosemont Copper, looking forward to completion of the permit process to open the Rosemont Copper Mine. The McCabe-Woodcock project is nearing completion after several years of work on our waste water treatment plants.

Rosemont Copper recently completed the North End Zone Project for the University of Arizona Football Stadium just in time for the 2013 football season. The Solana Generating Station in Gila Bend, AZ, is scheduled to be fully on-line by the end of this year. This state-of-the-art facility will power 175,000 homes. It will prevent 475,000 tons of carbon dioxide emissions per year when it’s at peak production.

The 1,900-acre solar facility uses curved mirrors that heat oil-filled pipes to create steam. Some of the oil will heat large vats of salt, which will be used to create steam and produce electricity for up to six hours after the sun sets.

More than 220 IBEW Local 640 members worked approximately 100,000 man-hours during the construction with several of our signatory contractors on the project, including PayneCrest Electric, Surgeon Electric and Swain Electric.

Although there was no project labor agreement on this project, our members performed outstanding work, and there were virtually no insurmountable issues throughout the entire project. Congratulations and heartfelt thanks go to all of our members and contractors who helped us “shine” on this world-class solar project.

Annual Awards Ceremony
L.U. 666 (Unktol), RICHMOND, VA—At the Annual Awards Ceremony, there were 37 new journeyman graduates from two apprenticeship graduating classes. Congratulations to you all! Peter R. Dietrich and Adam J. Burke received apprentice of the year awards for their respective class years.

In addition, 66 service pins were awarded to members for 25-65 years of service. Service award recipients included: Charles J. Tenter Jr. (for 65 years of service); Thomas D. Freeman, James H. Pace and Thomas W. Tuck, Jr. (55 years’ service); Stanley M. Alcin, Daniel F. Berlin, Hartwell M. Henschaw, Aubrey D. Hobson, Ronald M. Lowman, James D. Mantlo Jr., Thomas E. Menefee, John A. Munro Jr. and Ralph P. Wood (50 years’ service).

The Union Sportsmen’s Alliance benefit dinner earlier this year was a great success, raising money for the York River State Park service project. You may have seen an article, “USA Volunteers improve Trail Access in VA,” about that project on the IBEWWeb project. Thanks to all the union volunteers and contributors to the event! To read the article visit: www.ibew.org/articles/13daily/130817/130828_USAVolunteers.htm.

This year the Richmond IATC has held a master’s review class; a train-the-trainer course for medium voltage splicing; and as of press time has an instrumentation class ongoing. Future Journeyman classes will be posted on our Local 666 Web site www.ibewlocal666.com and on the RIATC Web site www.riatc.com.

Best wishes to recent retirees Michael S. Ferrell, Ernest L. Thomas and Darrell W. Retlig! Charles Shelly, P.S.

‘Good News for Local 692’
L.U. 692 (IL,mt,spa), BAF CITY, MI—Our work picture has improved and should employ local members throughout the winter. The wind farm work won’t get rolling until next spring.

We thank our sister locals for putting our members to work while things have been slow in our local.

Please stay involved and attend our monthly meetings. We are serving food at all of our monthly union meetings.

Our sympathy goes out to families of the following retired members who recently passed away: Bros. Clair Diamond, Raymond W. Dinkel, Colburn M. Spaulding and Clarence E. Techlin. We wish everyone a merry Christmas and a happy and healthy new year!

Tammy Gottliebe, P.S.

New Contract Agreements
L.U. 702 (ass,cat,cus,em,es,et,gov,lit,mo,mt, o,p,pet,pt,tth,tts,es,spa, st,lu,uu,uuw,ku), WEST FRANKFORD, IL—As we continue blazing a trail into the future, “Honoring our Past” has been a longtime theme of Local 702. With that in mind, several retired members were honored with 50-year, 55-year, 60-year, 65-year, and even 70-year service pins at the August 2013 union meeting, thanking them for their sacrifices made in order to obtain the benefits so many of our members today enjoy.

As of this writing, we are waiting on a National Labor Relations Board trial decision regarding two unjoint terminations at Consolidated Communications (parent company of Illinois Consolidated Telephone Company) following last December’s unfair labor practice six-day strike. We hope to have results of the NLRB decision by year’s end.

Our referral books are as follows: Inside Construction—88; Outside Construction—8; and Line Clearance—4.

This year, we have new agreements at Vectren, Egyptian Co-op, Southern Co-op, Southeastern Co-op, Southern Illinois Power Cooperative, Coles Moultrie Co-op, Renal Lake Conservancy District, Illinois Gas, Frontier, Cairo Public Utility, the City of Mine, Ameren MO, and M&A Co-op, with open negotiations at BMU, the City ofFlora, Hamilton County, and Egyptian Telephone.

“So Long, 2013’”
L.U. 1116 (em,lctt&u), TUCSON, AZ—OK, where did this year go? Time really does fly as we get older—and with this in mind, our local has maintained focus on organizing new hires with much success, as we see so many longtime members retiring.

Congratulations and best wishes to recent retirees: Robert Rogers, Jesus Meza, Merle Bradley and Donald Allison.

Welcome to Local 1116’s new members, including: Adam Myers, April Anaya, Manny Baviche, Adam Bingham, Samuel Larson, Andrew Weigel, Kevin Wilmer and David Worrel. Several new members took the oath of obligation at the September union meeting. It is important to stress that monthly union meetings are an important part of any local.

The Tucson & Springerville Power Production departments received the initial go-ahead for their apprenticeship programs in the electrical and I&C crafts starting in 2014, and we are now looking at the mechanical and welding craft programs in 2015 as well. A union work force strengthens safety and quality craftsmanship for the future.

Our local looks forward to 2014 and wishes all fellow union brothers and sisters a great holiday season and a successful and happy new year.

R. Couveller, P.S.

Tradition of Community Service
L.U. 1466 (u), COLUMBUS, OH—On Saturday, Sept. 28, Local 1466 held our annual Fall Gathering at the union hall. Once again, we continued to see increased attendance from our membership, as well as many families and children taking part in the festivities. The food was catered by Hickory House and was popular as always. We thank all those who were able to attend. We also thank the Executive Board for planning the event and helping to make it such a success!

As many of you know, in September we also kicked off our partnership with AEP to help raise money for United Way. In addition, our local was presented the Celebration of Excellence Award for our effort in 2012. This reward is a testament to our members’ dedication to improving our communities and reaching out to those in need. This is what the labor movement has always been about, and we are proud that our members are carrying on that tradition.

We hope everyone has a safe and happy holiday season!

IBEW Members ‘Shine’ on World-Class Solar Plant
L.U. 640 (em,gov,l,mo,mt,ts,spa&k), PHOENIX, AZ—IBEW Local 640 members brought superb skills to construction of one of the world’s largest solar thermal generating plants.

The Solaris Generating Station in Gila Bend, AZ, is scheduled to be fully on-line by the end of this year. This state-of-the-art facility will power 75,000 homes. It will prevent 475,000 tons of carbon dioxide emissions per year when it’s at peak production.

Three of Local 702’s retired 50-year service pin recipients: Ralph Wilmouth (left), Donald Smith and Logan Markow.

Some of the newly elected Local 570 officers recently sworn in gather for a photo.
The volunteers were feted at Yankee Stadium and vide companion dogs and prosthetics for veterans. Our 2013 Labor Day parade was a great success with good participation. Our meetings are informative and interesting, and a chance to see old buddies.

Bus. Mgr. Frank Jacobs is using social media to communicate to great advantage; we hope many are able to participate in this manner. Local 1 is a true community asset that we are all proud of.

At the time of this writing, a club meeting was scheduled for Nov. 20, 2013, with a light lunch served as usual. Attendees enjoy good fellowship for all and shared happy memories of old times together.

Meetings scheduled for 2014 are as follows: March 19, May 21, July 16, Sept. 17 (luncheon), and Nov. 19. Start time is approximately 11 a.m. Mark your calendars.

Charity Drives

RETIREES CLUB OF L.U. 3, NEW YORK, NY, NASSAU CHAPTER—As we have for every Sept. 11, at our meeting this year we honored and read the names of our members who lost their lives on that day. A larger tribute can be seen on the IBEW Hour Power Web site www.ibewhourpower.com; go to that site’s video archive and click on “IBEW Local 3, Freedom Tower.” The video makes one all the more proud to be an IBEW member.

Our 2013 annual picnic went well. The food was great and Jackie Weiss, Judy Montario and Mary Scalabba coordinated the games, making it a great day.

Starting off our fall activities, George Geyer handed the October Fest Luncheon and did a great job. More events will follow.

Our annual charity drives again will benefit organizations including the Michael Nigro Foundation Cancer Care for Kids, a project of our late past vice chairman Joe Torino. Other drives include: the Foundation Cancer Care for Kids, a project of our benefit organizations including the Michael Nigro Foundation Cancer Care for Kids. The Club meets at noon the second Thursday of every month at 10 a.m. Lunch will be served.

Erica Vinas, Pension Dir. Tom Gallagher and Judy Blakes delivered informative presentations to Local 3, Westchester/Putnam Chapter, Retirees Club.

‘Healthy Lifestyle’

RETIREES CLUB OF L.U. 3, NEW YORK, NY, WESTCHESTER/PUTNAM CHAPTER—Our annual visit, from July 8-15, to the Long Island Education Center was a great success. Pension Dir. Tom Gallagher presented an informal address. That was followed by two four-hour seminars, hosted by wellness coordinator Judy Blades and nutritionist Erica Vinas; topics were “Healthy Living” and “Nutrition and Diabetes Prevention.” Both seminars were very informative, stressing the importance of nutrition and physical fitness to our everyday health and well-being. Staying healthy also requires reading and understanding labels on packaged food products and how they apply to us.

Today, men and women have a longer life expectancy, so nutrition and physical activity are extremely important. Many conditions that plague us today can be held in check by a few basic dietary strategies. For example, limiting sodium to three-quarters of a teaspoon of salt (1,500 mgs or less) and consuming more fiber lowers blood cholesterol and improves blood sugar levels. This information is only a portion of what these classes brought to our attention.

Thanks to all who made our stay educational and enjoyable.

Summer Resort Trip

RETIREES CLUB OF L.U. 3, NEW YORK, NY, NORTH NEW JERSEY CHAPTER—Our Retiree chapter went to Woodloch Pines in Hawley, PA, June 24-27 for our summer getaway at the resort.

Sorry that many of our brothers and sisters were unable to attend. You were all missed.

Thank you to Abe Fichtenbaum, our photographer. The photo accompanying this article is a really good picture.

Enjoy the season. Be well, be happy. Travel safe.

Retirees Tour Navy Battleship

RETIREES CLUB OF L.U. 11, LOS ANGELES, CA—Some of the “old folks” at Local 11 still have a little pep in their step. We must have climbed at least a dozen ladders and stairways (fake) on the battleship USS Iowa, during the guided tour that 15 members of the club embarked upon in August. At this writing, 15-20 members were planning to take the train to San Diego on Nov. 14 to stroll around the town. A museum or another Navy warship tour might be on the agenda.

If you’re interested in future activities, come to the club meetings, held at the ETI, on the second Wednesday of every month at 10 a.m. Lunch will be served.

Also, don’t forget the Holiday Party at Tain’s Restaurant, downtown Los Angeles, on Dec. 11. We continue to see new members at our meeting every month. Maybe you’ll stop by soon. We wish all retirees, active members and staff of Local 11 a happy holiday season and a healthy, safe and prosperous new year!

Harvey “Butch” Bachand, Pres.

Eventful Club Schedule

RETIREES CLUB OF L.U. 60, SAN ANTONIO, TX—The club had its first meeting after a short break for the summer, and plans for the next nine months promise to be fun and exciting.

As a Christmas project, the club again picked the Wounded Warriors, who are so near and dear to our hearts. We will be collecting personal items through December to be taken to Ft. Sam’s Wounded Warriors headquarters.

In February, we will have a silent auction. Last year’s event was very successful, as one’s donation can be another’s treasure.

The main event comes in April with another golf tournament fundraiser. If it is as fun and rewarding as last year, everyone will be a winner.

Betty Cannon, past office manager of L.U. 60 and Retirees Club recording secretary, was one of the honorees at the San Antonio AFL-CIO Labor Day breakfast held Aug. 24. IBEW Organizer Craig Parkman was also acknowledged for his volunteer work.

The Club meets at noon the second Thursday of each month at the Plumbers and Pipefitters training building at 3630 Southeast. All Local 60 retirees are welcome. Please join us!

Sandy Rogers, P.S.

Annual Retirement Dinner

RETIREES CLUB OF L.U. 90, NEW HAVEN, CT—On Tuesday, Oct. 15, our annual retirement dinner was held at the Grotto Motor Inn to honor the latest group of Local 90 retirees. The following gentlemen were honored: Theodore Behrmann, Gary Browne, Donald Camdent, Paul Gontarski, John Heffernan, Daniel Lipinski, Walter Perry Jr., Max Riosal, Bruce Veronick and Paul Woytowich. We congratulate you and thank you for your service to the IBEW and invite you to join our Retirees Club.

Our club will hold its annual Christmas Holiday Luncheon on Dec. 3, at Fantasia in North Haven, CT. This is always a great time with good friends and good food. Many thanks go to our officers, and especially to Richard and Rose Kirby, for their help in planning and working to make it such a wonderful affair.

We wish all IBEW members and their families a joyous holiday season and a happy, healthy and safe new year.

Richard Launder, P.S.

Local 110 Family Picnic

RETIREES CLUB OF L.U. 110, ST. PAUL, MN—More than 900 members and their families attended the annual IBEW Local 110 Family Picnic. Local 110 retirees cooked and served hamburgers, hot dogs, shedded pork, popcorn and beverages at the summer getaway at the resort.
the July 27 picnic. Prizes were raffled off every hour by our past president, Bro. Frank Gurney. Events for the kids included rock climbing, face painting, cash tattoo, pony rides and ring the bell. It was a cool and windy day, but all had a good time. The hard-working retirees help make this great family event a huge success for our local union. Thanks to everybody who helped, and a special thanks to Bro. Joe Kelly, who continues to organize this outstanding event.

Good Turnout & Participation

RETIREES CLUB OF L.U. 137, BLOOMINGTON, IL—We are glad that Retirees Club meetings are getting a good turnout. It’s a good time to get together, have coffee and donuts, and solve the world’s problems. We are glad that our retirees remain active in the local by attending parades, golf outings and political affairs.

Among those who recently attended the Annual Democrats Day Breakfast in Springfield were: Dick Thompson, Don Armstrong, Dave Uible, Jack Roberts and Robin Roberts. They enjoyed a good breakfast and listened to labor-friendly candidates who want to move our state forward and put our members to work.

Once again we had a successful golf outing, for the 25th year. Retirees Jack Roberts and Robin Roberts have co-chaired the golf committee for many years. They put in a lot of time making preparations to ensure the event’s success, and we are thankful for their efforts. Local 34 members John Gruber, Ralph Henderson, John Zobrist and Tony Espinosa, who have played in the outing for many years, presented Jack and Robin with a special award for their demonstration of friendship and brotherhood over the years. Bro. Gruber delivered a heartfelt speech expressing appreciation to Jack and Robin for their hospitality.

Active and Growing

RETIREES CLUB OF L.U. 176, JOLIET, IL—Our Retiree Club is active and growing. We thank our members for the help on our activities. With our help, the annual picnic was a great success, and the upcoming Kid’s Christmas Party has always benefited from the retirees’ assistance.

Check your weekly Labor Record for upcoming events and Retiree Club meeting times. The more the merrier!

Our “baby boomers” have started to augment our numbers. Don’t forget the Retirees Club is still a very, very active organization. Help and participation is openly accepted.

Also, don’t forget to volunteer at your children’s or grandchildren’s schools. It is amazing how many parents, teachers and administrators ask about what our career was. It opens the door for career days, and various opportunities to present an explanation of our trade or to speak about electrical safety or our hobbies.

See you at the next meeting!

Mississippi River Cruise

RETIREES CLUB OF L.U. 236, ALBANY, NY—On Oct. 15, the Local 212 Retirees Club held its 39th annual luncheon at Trevi’s (The Italian American Community Center) at the 237 Washington Avenue Exit. “Being Prepared”

RETIREES CLUB OF L.U. 311, CINCINNATI, OH—Several of our members/spouses are facing serious medical problems. We extend our best wishes for their recovery.

I am sorry to report the July 29 death of club member Clifford “Bud” Tesling, a 47-year IBEW member. We mourn the loss of Bud as we mourn the loss of other Local 212 members who recently passed away.

Life can change in an instant, the proverbial “twinkling of an eye.” Local 212 employs a law firm ready to provide free consultations, wills and other services for our membership. Call the office for more information. As mortality and end-of-life decisions await everyone, issues to consider include updating wills and living wills, durable power of attorney, etc. Advance preparations are designed to ensure your final wishes and give peace to surviving loved ones.

Starting Jan. 1, 2014, Anthem will be the new healthcare provider for Local 212. Flu shots are already covered by Medicare and/or healthcare. New members for October are Mike Brennan and Jim Daly. It was also nice to see Joe Wellman at the meeting. Jim McKinney, a 72-year IBEW member, is a regular attendee of club events.

Best wishes for a healthy and prosperous new year.

Claysville Store, which is owned by Local 257 member Mark Hooblin and his wife, Laura. They are famous for their family-style dinner of fried chicken and country ham. We appreciate them arranging to feed our group again.

We look forward to seeing everyone at our Christmas luncheon in December.

Update from Boise Retirees

RETIREES CLUB OF L.U. 292, BOISE, ID—The October luncheon was held in Meridian at the Jode Horse Restaurant, with 36 in attendance. There was a small turnout due to opening day of deer hunting season; several of our members wanted to try their luck at shooting a deer. Also, our snowbird members were getting ready to go south before snowfall. Those who attended enjoyed a tremendous banquet of food including steamed clams. Brad Smith won our $5 monthly drawing; he was a happy man. Brad, don’t spend it all in one place!

We have a few members who are sick and we wish them well. The majority of the club members are enjoying good health.

Work is picking up. The local actually put the federal government shutdown doesn’t hurt anymore. We have 24 golfers taking part in competition. We had an additional 16 non-golfers come for the afternoon, making a grand total of 40 club members at the end of the competition. Herb Buntett and Bob Friedrich plan to organize this event and do a fine job with wonderful results. Peter Schenk arranges for prizes for the tournament, and it must be mentioned that our tournament would not be the success it is without his efforts.

Our group wishes all a wonderful holiday season and health and happiness in the New Year of 2014.

Sarnia Happenings

RETIREES CLUB OF L.U. 320, SARNIA, ONTARIO, CANADA—Our club has been busy and enjoyable this past summer with great turnouts at our meetings and our planned affairs. We enjoyed a cruise up the St. Clair River, stopping for dinner on the American side of the river before returning to Sarnia and viewing the lights of the Chemical Valley.

We enjoyed a fish dinner at Purdy’s Fisheries in Point Edward, consuming fish freshly caught in our own wonderful waters of Bluewater Land.

On Sept. 4 we held our Annual Retirees Club Golf Tournament. This outing is a yearly favourite and we had 24 golfers taking part in competition. We had an additional 16 non-golfers come for the afternoon, making a grand total of 40 club members sitting down to dinner at the end of the competition.

In December the breakfast is free, along with some extra drawings in the raffle, and a tribute to the staff in the Local 640 office who assist our secretary in our monthly mailings.

We welcome “younger” retired members to become a part of the Road Runners. Recent retirees are always needed to maintain the club.

We meet on the third Friday of each month at 9:30 a.m. at the union hall.

‘Thanks to Volunteers’

RETIREES CLUB OF L.U. 702, WEST FRANKFORT, IL—At the Retirees Club meeting held Oct. 3 in Marion, IL, there were 29 members and guests in attendance.

We extend a sincere “thank you” to our members who volunteered to work the union pavilion during the DuQuoin State Fair, where we gave away a new Weber Summit grill.

Members are encouraged to attend and bring other retired members to the next meeting, scheduled for Thursday, Dec. 5, at Bennie’s Italian Foods in Marion. At the Dec. 5 meeting, an election for a new president will be held.

Service Pins Awarded

RETIREES CLUB OF L.U. 796, DAYTONA BEACH, FL—We had a great welcome back from our summer break with a crowd of about 60 for a fish fry and all the fixings. The fish prepared by Greg and the fellows was delicious as usual! Steve Gibbs has taken over for Jimmy Warren as president. Pins were awarded to members with 50-, 55- and 60-year of service. We congratulate and thank you all for your commitment and years of service to the union.

Our October meeting was a potluck dinner with a good turnout, and our November meeting is always a hit with our Thanksgiving theme. We hope to see you at our December meeting (ham), and we wish you a merry Christmas and look forward to seeing you in the new year at our annual Chili Cook-off, on Jan. 9, 2014.

As always, we wish to invite any retired and unemployed brothers and sisters and their spouses who are in the area to come join us. Our meetings are the second Thursday of each month, 11:30 a.m., at the Local 756 union hall in Port Orange, FL.

Celebrating a Decade of Growth

RETIREES CLUB OF L.U. 804, KITCHENER, ONTARIO, CANADA—Our club is 10 years young. On Sept. 5, 2003, several enthusiastic retired members and spouses met at the “Hall” to establish a Local 804 retirees club. On a motion of Bro. Russ Hartwick, seconded by Lowell Shantz, it was unanimously agreed to apply for a club charter. Founding members listed on the charter are: Ken Woods, Lowell Shantz, David Rendell, Edward Krouse, Gino Tonin and Joseph Piuska. Those six founding members served as the club’s first officers and board members.

Now a very active group of happy retired “sparklies,” our club has grown to 70-plus members. Monthly meetings and luncheons are well-attended. Thanks to Bro. Frank “the arranger” Ische, we enjoy shows, theater and delicious meals while travelling. Retirees volunteer for many community charitable events. Bro. Doug Richard and dedicated volunteers wire Habitat for Humanity homes.

We enjoy visits to our sister retirees clubs. We thank our friends in Hamilton, Toronto and Ottawa for their friendship.

The labour movement faces attacks at all levels of government. In proposed legislation that would align Canadians with “right-to-work” states, the federal government was temporally stopped, but Prime Minister Stephen Harper is not through yet; we must assist our active members when that fight continues.

The Electrical Worker was the name of the first official publication of the National Brotherhood of Electrical Workers in 1893 (the NBEW became the IBEW in 1899 with the expansion of the union into Canada). The name and format of the publication have changed over the years. This newspaper is the official publication of the IBEW and seeks to capture the courage and spirit that motivated the founders of the Brotherhood and continue to inspire the union’s members today. The masthead of this newspaper is an adaptation of that of the first edition in 1893.

In 2013, Much Progress, Miles to Go

As we enter the holiday season and make plans for the New Year, I am humbled by the commitment of so many of our union’s members. Whether you hail from big cities or small towns, from the Arctic tundra or the shores of Guam, our brothers and sisters in every branch of our organization work tirelessly to earn the respect of our neighbors and those who benefit from our labor. We have a message for those powerful corporations or policy makers in Washington and Ottawa who disrespect and dishonor the hard work of our members and our union’s mission: Our legacy is indelible. We will not go into a defensive crouch. We will never be satisfied as long as any of our members are out of work. And we will keep our ears, our hearts and the doors of the IBEW open to workers inside and outside our ranks who need a voice on the job.

Our mission is not bluster or rhetoric. In 2013, in the midst of a slow recovery, local unions across our jurisdictions adopted innovations to help our signatory contractors staff projects small and large—from data centers in the Utah desert to the world’s largest yogurt plant in Idaho to wind farms from Alaska to Maine.

Our union’s new business development team is building solid relationships with end users that can only help put more inside and outside electricians to work. Our Code of Excellence has now been tailored for six of our key industries and continues to win respect for our Brotherhood. And we have taken giant steps in modernizing our NJATC training programs to upgrade members’ skills and turn out a new generation of journeymen.

Members and non-members are complimenting the IBEW’s national TV advertising campaigns, which has helped reestablish our union in the public’s mind with quality work and commitment to community. We have seen an exciting spike in unorganized workers contacting our union asking for help. And our union is winning more representation elections than any other international union, even in hard-pressed sectors like manufacturing.

On the political front, our local unions have helped win major, but often unsung, victories that save jobs and protect our members’ standard of living—from passing legislation in Austin, Texas, to stopping anti-union contractors who misclassify their workers as independent contractors to mobilizing in Nebraska and California and other states to block municipalities from privatizing public services.

We have staked out positions on everything from EPAs policies on coal-fired power plants to problems with the Affordable Care Act, putting the needs of our members first, not winning favor with politicians.

Our union’s future will depend upon young workers who will not only fill the shoes of leaders who retire, but who will take our collective bargaining, organizing, political and community engagement work to new heights. In 2013, we hosted our union’s first young member RENEW Conference to provide an ongoing forum and training for these emerging activists and leaders.

Paraphrasing the words of the great poet Robert Frost, “We have promises to keep and miles to go before we sleep.” I wish all of our members a healthy and prosperous holiday season and New Year. Let us continue to carry the proud legacy of the IBEW into the year ahead.

The Hidden Anti-Worker Network

You’ve probably heard of Scott Walker, John Kasich and Rick Scott—just some of the governors who came to power in the 2010 midterm elections and immediately went after workers’ rights.

But you may not have heard of the well-funded network that is behind their legislative agenda.

The American Legislative Exchange Council is a national alliance funded by some of the country’s largest corporations. It counts as members hundreds of state legislators and it is allied with the anti-union Associated Builders and Contractors.

The group churns out model bills for use by elected officials on everything from deregulation to weakening workplace protections.

A new 79-page report by the Economic Policy Institute’s Gordon Lafer shows how ALEC’s agenda already is hurting all workers. You can read it at www.epi.org.

Lafer makes it clear that one of ALEC’s top goals is to turn the construction industry into a low-wage, zero-regulation haven. They want to turn a career in construction from being a pathway into the middle class into another dead-end, Walmart job. Just look at some of the legislation ALEC’s friends have pushed:

• Ten states have passed laws outlawing or restricting the use of project labor agreements in 2011-2012 alone.
• Five states repealed or dramatically scaled back prevailing wage laws.
• A law banning occupational licensure, allowing anyone off the street to do electrical work.
• Five states repealed or dramatically scaled back prevailing wage laws.

You just have to scan the table of contents of Lafer’s report, listing everything ALEC is against—child labor laws, sick leave, workplace safety standards—to figure out that the tea party’s and ALEC’s agenda is bad news for you and your community. And it doesn’t matter whether you are a public- or private-sector worker. This applies to Canada as well because ALEC-type ideas are being pushed by reactionary politicians north of 49.

We need to pay attention to who is running for every office. ALEC amassed power because of gains by extremist office holders at every level of government, which set the stage for many of the fights in which we have been engaged over the past two years.

Let’s make 2014 the year we turn things around from the local level to the halls of Congress, and let’s send ALEC and their friends packing.

Letters to the Editor

In Case of Emergency, Call I-B-E-W

The October article “(U)tility Companies Recruit Wiremen for Emergency Response Teams” on the need for more first responders was excellent and right to the point. I have been a first responder as long as I have been in the IBEW and am continuing in the role since my retirement. When a disaster strikes, we have always picked up our tool boxes and reported to the scene.

In 1989 during the San Francisco earthquake, we were the first electricians on the Oakland side of the Bay to respond and set up power and communications. Having worked in the area, we knew how to contact PG&E and telephone companies. We got temporary power and communications up during the night and also assisted in rescue operations.

In 1991 my home town, Paradise, Calif., was hit with a freak snowstorm which wiped out power for five days. Outside line crews were brought in and immediately ran into problems. I responded with several other inside wiremen and led the line crews in.

We inspected every service and assisted line crews in disconnecting all the damaged services so they could get the mains lines in operation. Without our help, they would have been days on the job just finding the breaks.

During the fires in Northern California in 2008, we assisted again. Since we knew the area we both bird dogged for line crews but also for the firefighters who were brought in. We made maps for the crews and established communications. I was on the job in San Francisco on 9/11 when we got word to shut down all the major buildings. Several of us headed for the convention center where the IBEW convention was taking place and assisted our representatives.

After my retirement I joined the Red Cross and trained as a first responder. Without communications and accurate damage assessment there can be no response. This is where IBEW inside wiremen communications workers, and linemen can really help. In northern California we have helped in setting up fire safe councils, emergency operations training and assisted in training electrical inspectors.

Those of us who have had years of electrical work are valuable assets. We provided the best quality workmanship for years, building America. We are available.

No Work, No Workers?

I was just reading October’s edition of The Electrical Worker. I read Mr. Hill’s column (“All in to Win?”) and tried to see his point of view about organizing all workers in the electrical trade under one banner. But isn’t that point of view a little far-fetched?

(“All in to Win?”) and tried to see his point of view about organizing all workers in the electrical trade under one banner. But isn’t that point of view a little far-fetched?

Let’s concentrate on leaning on our contractors to bid work. It does not do any good to say make all this money and have all these great benefits if there is no work. How do you expect to organize if there is no work?

That’s why left the IBEW work scene: no work. I am a member in good standing of the police and fire departments, veteran’s groups and the American Legion—but to make sure they get a proper welcome.

This can range from mayoral proclamations thanking the returning veterans for their service to miles of American flags and digital signs thanking them for their service.

It might seem like a small gesture, but “just 20 minutes on a line waving a flag for a returning veteran is a positive force that will be remembered for the remainder of the service member’s life,” said Cook.

The inspiration, said Cook, came after he and his wife traveled to California to meet their son, a Marine finishing his tour of duty in Afghanistan, at the airport.

He was getting off the plane with his platoon and I realized that some of the troops had no one there to greet them,” Cook said. “We decided that every one of our vets deserved a welcome home.

They decided to throw a welcoming event for a friend who was returning from Afghanistan, which led to a follow-up call from a local resident wanting to organize something similar for a returning service member.

Since then the couple’s commitment to helping our men and women in uniform has blossomed into a full-fledged organization.

Cook says he is also working on a project to provide every returning local veteran with an American-made Stars and Stripes flag for their home.

“I think of the feeling I get when I see a lot of American flags—the sheer pride, it just brightens my day,” he said.

“I want to make sure they have that feeling when they get back.”

He and Gretchen have delivered dozens of flags, including some to vets from previous conflicts. In November, he delivered flags to two World War II veterans.

“Both of them were in their ‘90s and didn’t have a flag,” Cook said. “It was incredible to meet men from that generation.”

In addition to welcoming veterans home, Mission: American Gratitude is working with other veterans’ organizations to provide a network to help ex-service members make the transition into civilian life—particularly handling post-traumatic stress disorder.

“I’m not an expert, but I want to at least be able to point them toward some resources, even if that just means connecting an older vet with a newer one,” he said.

One of the main reasons Cook said he devotes so much time to the organization is his concern that many have forgotten about the very real conflicts American soldiers face everyday.

“We’re at war in Afghanistan for 12 years now and it has become easy to tune it out and get complacent,” he said. “I want to rekindle some patriotic spirit and make sure none of our troops are forgotten.”

The organization is mainly active around southern Illinois, but Cook says he hopes others across the country will start their own veteran welcoming groups.

“I want someone once told me, “pursue your passion and you will find your purpose,”” Cook said. “Well, we’ve found our purpose.”

St. Louis Member: ‘All Veterans Deserve a Proper Welcome’

They put their lives on the line, serving their nation in dangerous overseas theaters. America’s veterans are often away from their friends and family for years at a time.

The least they deserve is a proper welcome home, said St. Louis Local 1 member Rodney Cook.

“I am a member in good standing of veteran’s groups like the American Legion—to make sure they get a proper welcome.

This can range from mayoral proclamations thanking the returning veterans for their service to miles of American flags and digital signs thanking them for their service.

Notice to Participants in the National Electrical Annuity Plan

Explanations of Preretirement Surviving Spouse Benefit

If you are married and die before retirement, NEAP will provide your spouse with a Preretirement Surviving Spouse Benefit. Your spouse will receive this benefit if: (1) you have satisfied the minimum eligibility requirements of 160 credit hours or 10 years of covered employment with your employer, (2) you have a balance in your Individual Account, (3) you die prior to receiving a pension benefit, (4) you were married, and (5) you have not previously declined the Preretirement Surviving Spouse Benefit.

If you are entitled to a Preretirement Surviving Spouse Benefit, NEAP will purchase an annuity contract from an insurance company for your spouse. The annuity contract will pay your surviving spouse a monthly benefit for life. Monthly payments will begin within a reasonable period of time after your death. The amount of the monthly benefit depends upon: (1) the amount in your Individual Account, (2) your spouse’s age, (3) your spouse’s life expectancy, and (4) the insurance company’s price for annuity contracts.

Elections/Consents
If you are under age 35, your spouse will automatically receive the Preretirement Surviving Spouse Benefit. Your spouse must consent in writing and the consent given by a spouse is not effective as to a subsequent spouse. NEAP must be informed of any change in the designated beneficiary.

Lump Sum
If you decline the Preretirement Surviving Spouse Benefit, your Individual Account balance will be paid to your designated surviving beneficiary in a lump sum. If your designated surviving beneficiary is not your spouse, your spouse must also consent to that as well, in order for it to be valid. If you have not designated a beneficiary or your designated beneficiary is not living at the time of your death, the balance will be paid to the following persons, if living, in the following order of priority: (1) your spouse, (2) your children, (3) your parents, or (4) your estate. The total amount of money received as a lump sum may ultimately be different (either greater or lesser) than the total amount of money your spouse would have received under the Preretirement Surviving Spouse Benefit. This is because the Preretirement Surviving Spouse Benefit is an annuity and depends on the time value of money and how long your spouse lives. Additional information is available from the Plan Administrator’s Office.
